Editor's Letter

Dare I start this letter on a note of optimism? At the time of writing Donald Trump has been president of the USA for just over 100 days. I realise he is a Marmite character (you either love him or you hate him) but notwithstanding that I believe Nationalists will agree he is causing major waves throughout the world and appears to be one of those rare leaders who actually stands up for his own people. If only we had one of those! I say a note of optimism, as there seems to me that his decisions are creating an undercurrent here in Britain. The woke issues of recent years seem to have lost their appeal to those who cannot think for themselves and even our own Prime Minister is talking about, at the very least, issues relating to immigration. Perhaps we will notice the Trump effect more in six months or so, but I certainly feel it is a very good start.

On top of the above and with mixed emotions I can report that the political parties, having dominated our elections over the past 50 or so years, were given a good hiding at the local elections in May. I am pleased that Reform UK did so well but cannot help feel they are controlled opposition ensuring that many true Nationalists do not ally themselves with true "far right" groups, thereby preventing them from calling for a tougher line. It remains to be seen how they perform and we can certainly look forward to more elections next May when with luck the Labour party will lose as much support as the Conservatives have done.

Despite there being so many wrongs in our country that we need to put right, and on the basis of the above, I do think it is safe to say that there is indeed a glimmer of hope for our people. Consequently those of us who are able need to up our game to get our message across. Friends, family and work colleagues are a good bet to make a start, joining one of our Nationalist parties/groups is certainly another, although it is hoped that most of our readers are already signed up. Then we need to step up to spread our message, by leafletting villages and towns that are local. We can also write to local papers on local issues. The more we are seen to be involved the more of us it will appear there are and so the impetus will continue and more of our people will feel comfortable and confident in taking those steps necessary to join us. On the basis of the number of people that voted Reform at the latest elections and recalling the numbers that voted BNP in the past, as well as those that did not vote, presumably as they felt no-one was actually representing them, then there must be millions of people out there just waiting for that information that will make them think about taking that next step in joining us in our struggle. I truly believe that all is NOT lost and our fight is only just starting to gain traction, we CAN do this!

It would be remiss of me not to say a huge thank you to all of our subscribers, particularly our new ones, as well as our readers who do not subscribe. Also huge thanks are due to those who have given that little bit more by donating to our funds to ensure we can continue to produce a low price magazine for Nationalists. Particular thanks this month must go to one of our overseas subscribers, SG who being very keen to push Britain, My Nation on to greater heights, has placed an advertisement for our magazine in a newspaper in Canada. I am not sure that those employed in the newspaper industry in Britain would allow this!

Britain, My Nation will only be available by post on subscription and not via the internet or by email. Articles, letters, newspaper cuttings, and general comments for consideration for inclusion in future editions are welcomed, but please include your name and address if sending items (these will not be published, unless advised otherwise). We are planning on publishing Britain, My Nation for some time to come, but we can only do so with support from Nationalists within our community. As said above, we are truly grateful for the support and encouragement we have received to date but there is always more we can do, with donations being particularly helpful and very much appreciated, but also please make sure you mention Britain, My Nation to your friends, family and political comrades and perhaps request a couple of extra copies that you can distribute as samples. Thank you all once more.

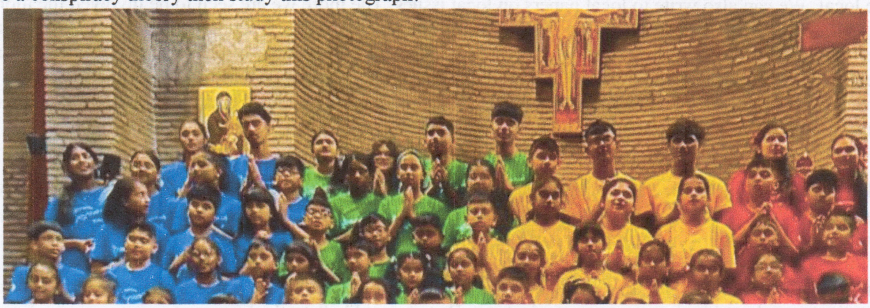
In the News – 1

Just before this edition of Britain, My Nation went to press there was a HORRIFIC ATTACK IN LIVERPOOL. As local people were on the streets in their thousands celebrating the success of Liverpool FC as champions of the Premier League and consequently parading by bus through the city, the attack occurred. It involved a man ploughing his car through the crowd injuring more than 70 but fortunately killing no-one. Partly due to the flack received by them in respect of the Stockport murders, Merseyside Police quickly identified the driver as a 53-year old local man (?) – see photo, right. There has been much speculation on social media regarding this attack and it may be that we never know the truth, but it has proven once more that the government and media cannot be trusted when attacks of this nature occur, particularly knowing that this type of attack is not the usual modus operandi of our own people.

Back in April POPE FRANCIS DIED, not an issue that we here at Britain, My Nation deem particularly newsworthy as Nationalists. Subsequent news of those mourning his death and the events that had been arranged by way of commemorating him however, did strike us as newsworthy by virtue of the fact they further emphasise the Great Replacement of our own people. Note the photograph below showing a choir at a school in Swindon who were singing in his memory. If anyone doubts that the Great Replacement is real and still believe it to be a conspiracy theory then study this photograph!



Also in Wiltshire, there is another worrying turn of events relating to DEVELOPMENT OF LOCAL LAND, and is possibly something that is happening throughout the country, so please let us know if that is the case. Lydiard Millicent, a small village on the outskirts of Swindon, and one which is fighting not to be absorbed within Swindon itself as a result of housing estates being built, has sent out letters to local people advising them that, as part of the Neighbourhood Plan Review, the Parish Council are exploring the option of including housing allocation to meet an identified need. What this need is actually isn't identified, but what essentially they are seeking is for landowners and householders to come forward and advise them if there is space on their own properties to allow further development i.e. more houses. If the native population of our nation is on the decline, then why would a rural village in Wiltshire have a need to build more houses? If there are too many people relating to existing housing stock then perhaps the problem of too many people needs addressing!

It appears that there is a popular IRISH HIP-HOP TRIO CALLED KNEECAP who are heavily associated with Irish republicanism, and who have caused a great deal of upset recently. For those readers who may not know what a 'hip-hop trio' is then all we can advise is that they are some form of modern pop group! One of the trio wears a woolly hood on stage in the colours of the Irish tri-colour and their name has connotations with the punishment shootings meted out by the IRA to those deemed to have committed 'political crimes' during the troubles in Northern Ireland. Also one of their number, Liam Og O hAnnaidh, whose stage name is Mo Chara, has been charged by the police for allegedly displaying a flag in support of the terrorist group Hezbollah at one of their gigs. There have been calls to ban the group but this is only adding to their notoriety and also points to the fact that the music industry is but a mere shadow of its successes in times gone by.

In the News - 2

As a result of the recent elections we have seen the appointment of several new mayors to local councils across the country. This has seen SEVERAL MUSLIM MAYORS APPOINTED. The new mayor of Rotherham, Rukhsana Ismail is one of those. It is understood that her grasp pf English is poor (she is Pakistani) and as is usual, the mayor isn't elected by the public but by the councillors on the council represented. It is understood that in her acceptance speech, delivered in Urdu and as translated for her, she said, "I am representing my Pakistani nation and Pakistani Muslim women", when it would be thought she was there to represent everyone in Rotherham! In Sheffield, Somalia Safiya Saaed (see photo, right), has been elected as the new Right Worshipful Lord Mayor of Sheffield and is their first ever black, Muslim, hijab-wearing Lord Mayor. Finally, we have Ajit Atwal, Derby's new mayor (see photo, left). Back in 2014, when a councillor he tweeted a photograph of himself complete with AK47. At the time he was called upon to remove the post but did not do so, although it seems he has since created a new profile. Our view here at Britain, My Nation is that those elected to such posts should at least be fluent in the English language and not attempt to represent alien cultures. If they are serving councillors and publish photographs, such as those Atwal has in the past, then they should be banned from office for life.

Back in April the UK Supreme Court ruled that THE LEGAL DEFINITION OF A WOMAN IS BASED ON BIOLOGICAL SEX. This news may surprise some, in that it couldn't be anything else. However, many of our politicians and woke-infected celebrities have been twisting nature for some time now insisting that this was not the case. Over recent years women and children have had the worry that men in dresses who say they are women, had access to women's toilets and changing rooms. This ruling has resulted in the ending of much of this ridiculous nonsense, with the Metropolitan Police immediately stating that men dressed as, and pretending to be women should no longer be involved in searching female suspects who have been arrested. How this happened in the first place is beyond comprehension, but that is what we have come to expect here in Britain.

Prime Minister Starmer and his Labour government continue to work for everyone but the country and people that it is supposed to represent. In May the government AGREED A LANDMARK DEAL WITH INDIA on an expectation that by 2040 Gross Domestic Product will increase by £4.8 billion annually, which although sounds a large amount, is actually equivalent to 0.1% of our current economy. However, part of this deal includes an agreement that Indian nationals working here in the UK will be entitled to a three-year national insurance holiday. British firms and their employees continue paying up to 15% in employer NI contributions thereby resulting in a two-tier tax system where British workers will suffer and Indian workers will benefit. Consequently, unprincipled employers will, of course, employ Indian workers instead of British as a cheaper option. Perhaps one day Starmer will realise he is in power essentially by default and that if his insistence on working for everyone but the British is not reversed, he will suffer the biggest downfall British politics has ever seen.

Finally, we see ex-advisor to Boris Johnson, Dominic Cummings re-emerging and stating that if he takes his advice NIGEL FARAGE WILL BECOME PRIME MINISTER. On current trends with Reform UK riding high in the polls and obtaining elected representatives in large numbers, it is likely that Farage may not need any advice. Cummings, also predicts that, with the Conservative Party seemingly on its last legs and rating at fourth in recent polls, their leader, Olukemi Olufunto Badenoch will be ousted by Christmas. This will come as no surprise to Nationalists, who have already predicted the party's downfall under the leadership of Badenoch for various reasons!

How We Won Millwall by Steve Smith – Part 4 of 5

This is the fourth instalment of an article, by Steve Smith, the 1993 Tower Hamlets British National Party Organiser, that was first published in the, now defunct, Patriot magazine, which ran to 8 issues between spring 1997 and summer 2001. Patriot, edited by Tony Lecomber, was very professionally produced and although sadly short-lived, served partly as a vehicle to promote the successful takeover of the BNP by Nick Griffin in replacing John Tyndall. Steve Smith (now of the British Democrats) has kindly given permission for us to reproduce this article which documents one of the finest hours in the history of the British National Party. Bear in mind these events took place when no internet was available and so the achievements detailed are all the more impressive when considering the extent of physical effort required by activists to get public attention.

To round off a superb year, we held another march similar to the one we had early in the year yet again protesting at racial attacks on whites in Tower Hamlets. Local support was again highly conspicuous as 250 people marched the same route as previously with the added bonus of the activity featuring as part of a forthcoming Panorama TV programme on the BNP. 1990 had seen us edging slowly towards the electoral high point of the Front in the 1970s.

1991 saw London BNP activities switch to S.E London for a while, which culminated in the Thamesmead march, a good by-election result in Camberwell and an excellent counter-demonstration in Bermondsey. However, discussion of these events is outside the scope of this article which is focussed on the growing success achieved in the East End. For Tower Hamlets branch, 1991 ended on a high note as we held the party's Annual Rally in York Hall, Bethnal Green. This large and impressive municipal building was to be used on two other occasions over the coming year. Nearly 500 people attended the rally and the subsequent local publicity further established the party's presence in the borough.

The first 3½ months of 1992 were exclusively used for the impending General Election of April that year. We fought both seats in Tower Hamlets and despite a lively and energetic campaign combined with an incredible amount of hard work, we just failed to save our election deposits. Though it must be said that our candidates polled the best results for nationalism at Parliamentary level since 1979. In Bethnal Green and Stepney we gained 1,300 votes for 3.6% of the poll and in Bow and Poplar we gained 1,107 votes for 3%. Clearly there was still a long way to go, but we were convinced that in a council election or by-election, we had the potential and ability to win a seat. Such a possibility would catapult the BNP onto the national stage and demonstrate to the public that 'Ours is not a wasted vote, that we can win'.

Worth mentioning at this point is the effect on the area that successful election results can have. In Tower Hamlets the local whites were still patriotic and racially conscious. Obviously there is an inherent element of this in many white East Enders – but the ethnic pride and patriotism comes to the surface and in many ways is more visible when a nationalist party does well in an area. Although many people may only vote, sympathise and possibly purchase a party paper, in their collective subconscious is the knowledge that there is a group still battling for their interests, there is still hope. Contrast this with whites who live in similar racially-mixed areas, but where there is no nationalist activity, many of them look crushed, defeated, beaten. I am convinced that all activity and effort by nationalists somehow percolates through to the people, giving them a flicker of hope that the nightmare of multi-racialism will end. When the BNP has been successful a virtuous circle is set in motion: a good election result creates more patriotism and pride thus more people are inclined to vote for the party.

The Bow and Poplar result was particularly interesting. Although very limited political work was performed in this constituency – most of the work going into Bethnal Green and Stepney – the result in Bow and Poplar was, given the lack of activity, quite good. Upon some rudimentary analysis, we came to the conclusion that a large slice of the vote could have come from the southern tip of Tower Hamlets – from the Millwall ward on the Isle of Dogs. Because of the comparative isolation of the Island from the rest of the borough, it had in the past received little attention. Now, however, we thought it might prove an interesting prospect. Our discussions turned idly to speculation on our prospects in an election in the area. Within 6 months our wish was answered. A by-election occurred there and polling day was set for October 1st 1992.

By this stage of our development, we decided that the unpredictable, noisy and volatile meetings were a thing of the past. Although they helped us to establish our name in Tower Hamlets, they required a great deal of resources and time to organise. More importantly, we had learnt from canvassing feedback as well as from anecdotal evidence that public meetings were becoming, by this time, somewhat counter-productive.

How Do We Save Our Decaying Country (Part 9)?

In the latest article in this series we take a brief look at our social and welfare system, arguably the biggest cause of our social and national decay by virtue of the massive expenditure for zero return. The 19th century story Dick Whittington and His Cat included the saying "London streets are paved with gold", a reference essentially to Britain being a "land of opportunity". Back then it would have been seen as a positive statement but over the years it has been taken almost literally by those who want something for nothing and has acted as a magnet to those who have left their own countries and migrated to ours. Over the last fifty years, numbers arriving here from poorer countries have increased massively, with millions expecting, and sadly receiving, handouts via successive governments from our own taxes! We have all seen the daily arrivals of boats containing these illegal immigrants, supposedly fleeing from persecution and so on, but actually only fleeing from France to Britain for the free accommodation and benefits that they receive on arrival. How it is expected that these people will ever successfully adapt to life here is unfathomable. They do not wish to assimilate into our society, they wish to leech on it. They do not want to be like us, they want us to be like them or worse and as the saying goes – import the Third World, become the Third World. The vast majority of our people are angry about this, they want action taken to stop the influx and at each election the politicians promise that they will reform the system, lying to our people, getting elected and subsequently doing absolutely nothing about the problem. Even now, Prime Minister Starmer seems to be making the noises he thinks we all want to hear, as he realises that by maintaining the status quo it will condemn him and his party to oblivion in the next election, particularly in the light of the gains Reform are currently making.

On top of the benefits paid to immigrants, we have a social security system that seems all too easy to abuse with our own people seemingly doing so on a massive scale. Increasingly we see those who say that they are better off on benefits than if they were working. Our schools and social services are happy to put a label on anyone who feels that they are inadequate in one way or another and suffering from "ailments" that didn't exist twenty years ago. ADHD (attention-deficit/hyperactivity disorder), autism, dyslexia and gender confusion issues have all been around for a long time but were once so rare that no-one knew of them. Now everyone seems to want one of these labels. The massive increase in mental problems particularly amongst our younger people largely stems from bad-parenting as a result of the selfish attitudes and lifestyles that the parents lead, together with the lack of discipline they instil. Consequently all sorts of benefits are available so these people do not have to work but can, so say, "lead independent lives", although it's hardly independent if you are funded by the state! An example we here at Britain, My Nation were made aware of is that of an 18-year old boy, who paid no attention at school and left with no qualifications, but allegedly has severe anxiety, particularly in socialising and being around other people. He lives at home but apparently still manages to visit a local pub twice a week. Because of this "mental issue" he is entitled to PIP (Personal Independence Payment) providing him with around £100 per week on top of any other benefits to which he might be entitled, by virtue of his supposed inability to work and so is essentially on the scrap heap at 18. To register as being mentally challenged, confirmation is required from a health professional. One might say that they should be stricter and refuse to provide this, but the "patient" only has to suggest they feel suicidal and the health professional has no option but to provide such confirmation for fear of the "patient" actually carrying out such a "threat" and the consequences this may have for them in their profession. This example is just one of many that our readers will be aware of.

All of this needs to stop and it is relatively easy to do that. With regards the benefits available to illegal immigrants, these could be stopped immediately. This would effectively stop the flow overnight, if the streets were no longer "paved with gold", then no incentive would exist for them to come here. Perhaps then they might even consider working towards making their country of origin one in which they felt better suited.

With regards reducing the reliance our younger people have on benefits, we looked in edition 5 of Britain, My Nation at National Service and how a revised form of that would go a long way to giving our youth back the pride and self-respect it no longer seems to have as well as largely removing the assumption that the state will support you if you can't be bothered. It is, of course, not just the younger people who seemingly abuse our benefits system, so we would need to carry out sweeping reforms to the overall system including a reassessment of all the benefits currently paid and who receives them. Obviously there are those who genuinely need state support and by a having a complete review would ensure that their benefits continue.

In our final instalment of this series of articles, coming in edition 10, we will look at the one major policy the implementation of which will save our nation!

The Homeland Party's Big Remigration Conference

It was with great pleasure that 'Britain, My Nation' editor, Robert Baggs accepted an invitation to attend the Big Migration Conference, as organised by The Homeland Party. In his opinion this was one of, if not the, most professional conferences he has attended in 35 years as a Nationalist and it showed that the Homeland Party are leading the way on the remigration issue.

Arriving at the venue it was apparent there was a positive feeling amongst the attendees, many of whom would have been in nappies 35 years ago! This was seen as an encouraging sign as Nationalism has often been seen as the domain of the older generation and that the younger generation has been lost to the politically correct brain-washing in schools and society in general.

The conference was opened by party leader Kenny Smith who spoke passionately about how, for our movement to progress, we must all adopt a sensible Nationalist approach as well as embrace community-based politics as a baseline for achieving remigration. He also suggested that with the appropriate levels of energy and unity, Nationalism can achieve the remigration necessary for our country to return to its former glory.

The next speaker was Alec Cave, the party's National Media Officer and South East Regional Organiser, who delivered an incisive speech on ethnic identity and the need to have an understanding of our own people as a crucial step in defining an effective remigration policy.

Cllr Anthony Burrows followed providing a hard-hitting analysis of political realities and how best to advocate for remigration policies among the wider public, further emphasising how essential it is that we have a political party as a vehicle to bring new ideas to the mainstream.

The first guest speaker Branko Roric, the media expert from Germany's AfD (Alternative for Deutschland), gave a detailed presentation on the techniques used in challenging the mainstream narrative.

Mrs Lena Kotre, and AfD MP, then spoke about her success in winning increased electoral support by working to keep women safe from migrant violence and so securing a larger majority in her constituency. She also spoke about how political activists, like us, who try to do the right thing, will always be attacked by the liberal mainstream, and that, to win, we must never back down from what we know is right.

Final speaker was Mr Renaud Camus, the French intellectual responsible for coining the term "The Great Replacement". 78 year old Mr Camus had been banned, by the Home Office, from entering the United Kingdom, on the grounds that his views on mass migration were deemed politically inconvenient. However, as a result, the party received a great deal of publicity with mentions on mainstream TV and in the media. Mr Camus still managed to address the conference via video link, so ensuring Home Secretary Yvette Cooper and team scored a huge own goal! Mr Camus spoke of the great crime inflicted on the people of Britain and France in allowing the colonisation of our nations and declared that the Great Replacement is a reality and not just a theory and is also part of a larger phenomenon of "global replacism". He stressed that remigration must be broader than simply removing criminal migrants in order that our nations be saved.

Finally a question and answer session was held with the conference ending on a very positive note indeed.

Which Nationalist Party? (1 of 4)

Britain, My Nation is published in an effort to encourage the Nationalist community to work together towards our common goal. We see that goal being a return of our nation to that of 60 or so years ago when it was the envy of the world due to the achievements of our indigenous population. Many say that it is too late and that there are too many immigrants here, that those aliens who have infiltrated our political system, our media, and all of society, injecting their destructive poison in an attempt to annihilate the white race and all that we once stood for, have become too strong. At Britain, My Nation we say that attitude is wrong. We are still the majority in our nation and there is much we can do to stop what is happening and reverse what we see as wrong.

Consequently in the following four pages we look at those political parties and groups who are working to that end in the hope that, with many of them, the many minor differences that exist between them can be overcome and so, rather than fight amongst ourselves and criticise those who are essentially brothers in arms, alliances should be formed, as together we are stronger.

We have looked at the main policies in recent editions of our magazines and will now look at what each party is achieving, reporting on newsworthy items where we are aware of them. We will also add to and delete from our listings should we be made aware of new organisations, or those who exist in name only and achieve nothing for our cause. Our last edition included both the New British Union and the Populist Party for the last time, their membership numbers are extremely small and they carry out little or no activity.

Will Britain, My Nation have any impact or influence on the unification of the Nationalist movement? Who knows? However, what we do know is that at least we are making that effort – perhaps other Nationalists need to ask themselves whether or not they are doing the same.

British Democratic Party

The British Democrats remains one of the most active political parties and recently their activity and membership has increased. It was reported recently that the party treasurer sent their 2024 party accounts to the Electoral Commission, as is required of registered parties, and although these are yet to appear on the EC web-site, the party are reporting that total income from donations and memberships has increased by 47.4% compared to the 2023 total of £8868. Despite a relatively small budget the party performed well in the May elections resulting in the election of candidates Peter Lawrence to Mylor council in Cornwall, Frank Calladine to two separate parish council seats in Doncaster and Lawrence Rustem for Downswood parish in Maidstone, Kent with 54.5% of the vote. With the recent increase in membership the fortunes of the BDP may well be on the up, but unless the party appeal stretches to younger members it may be a short term improvement as the older members of which, there are many, cease being politically active.

Britain First

Although the party boasts of a relatively large membership and has a strong social media presence, no candidates stood in the May elections. In his article, on the party web-site, in which he analyses the election results, leader Paul Golding states that "It was definitely the correct decision … to sit these elections out, as the Reform juggernaut would have guaranteed paltry results", he continues "A good general … preserves his strength and waits patiently for the right time to strike". We are not sure that the party members would totally agree with this policy however, as it begs the question as to when will it be the right time to strike?

With the recent arrival of the new Christian Nationalist Party (whose leader is Golding's ex-girlfriend), and UKIP increasing its Christian slant, then at least one of these parties may soon feel the squeeze. Although as a Christian party they hope to combat those who are anti-Islam, it is not attractive to all. Many Nationalists may well be Christian with a small 'c' but would rather not mix religion and politics. Golding continues with his Marches for Remigration, the most recent being in Birmingham with a good turnout, with all attending carrying a flag creating an impressive appearance. Other marches are presumably in the pipeline. Unfortunately Paul Golding, despite ensuring his party are very active on social media, makes regular gaffes which are more than likely to put off Nationalists who are floating, having not made a decision with which party they wish to become involved with. His criticisms of other Nationalist party's verge on the type of rhetoric that might be expected from those determined to destroy us, organisations such as Hope Not Hate, for example. A video from the Birmingham event surfaced showing Golding mistakenly attempting to greet someone he took to be a BF member resulting in a surfeit of bad language. This doesn't look good and Nationalist leaders need to be disciplined enough to walk away.

Which Nationalist Party? (2 of 4)

British Freedom Party

It seems the arrival of the Christian Nationalist Party (see below) must mean the end for the British Freedom Party so it will be removed from future editions of Britain, My Nation. Strangely the party website is still accessible and the "Join Today" link is still working, so it is hoped this is rectified soon to avoid anyone spending good money on a non-entity.

British Movement

Party Secretary Steve Frost regularly sends Britain, My Nation updates regarding BM activity (and this is greatly appreciated), this showing that BM are keen to increase their presence. Regular leafletting and community based activities are actually on the increase, particularly in north London and the north-west of England, social media is updated regularly and the online magazine The Emblem is back in production and available free by emailing – newemblemteam@protonmail.com.

Christian Nationalist Party (see British Freedom Party)

A new addition to our list appears in this edition. The first post, on the 20th April 2025, on the party website www.thechristiannationalistparty, informs us of "A New Crusade: The Launch of The Christian Nationalist Party". Jayda Fransen is the Founder (but not leader, apparently) and the Rev. Jim Dowson is the Ecclesiastical Advisor (being the incumbent minister of St Mary Magdalene Chapel, the priory Church of the Knights Templar Order UK/Ireland). Both have, for some time, worked closely with ex-BNP leader, Nick Griffin, so it can be assumed he is involved despite the party website not mentioning him. There is also no evidence on the Electoral Commission website that the party has been registered, although with Griffin denouncing electoral politics of late, this is no surprise. The website says to "Join the world's ONLY Christian Nationalist Party to champion a nation rooted in Christian values, where faith, family, and freedom guide our future!", however we tot up the number of parties campaigning under this banner and included in our listings as four so far.
For an annual membership fee of £36 or a monthly fee, with various options from £5 to £500, your membership pack will include a welcome letter, membership card and key fob, member lapel badge, pocket shield medal/coin, member pen, mini manifesto booklet and a selection of tracts.

The website has a Knights Templar feel about it and includes the Latin phrase Deus Vult! (God wills it!). It is difficult to believe this party will have any impact but we will monitor it for the time being.

English Democrats

Sadly the ED's level of physical and social media activity is decreasing. The party led by Robin Tilbrook for more than 20 years seems not to have progressed very much at all since day one. This may well be because the English Nationalist cause is overshadowed by the British Nationalist cause, one which becomes more important, the more our nation suffers under the rule of fools.

The party very positively publicised candidate Catherine Blaiklock, (ex Brexit Party leader) in standing for the party in the Runcorn and Helsby parliamentary by-election, the seat vacated after ex-Labour MP Mike Amesbury's conviction for assault. With 15 candidates and Reform UK standing (and winning) it was always going to be a difficult contest and the ED's disappointingly came 12th, behind the Monster Raving Loony Party and with only 95 votes or 0.29% of the total. It may be close to the time that the party starts thinking of merging with another party.

Heritage Party

Although the party stood 23 candidates countywide in the council elections and although not analysing all of their results, the absence of any report within their social media, that we could find, suggests that these were poor with a possible high of around 5% but with less than 100 votes, with one candidate on 7 votes. As with other civic Nationalist parties, performance would have been severely affected by the strong Reform UK results. Party leader, David Kurten, who once hosted a show on TNT, an independent television network which is no longer operating, is now believed to have introduced a similar show via YouTube. Kurten has, on occasion, appeared as a commentator on GB News, being one of the very few "right-wing celebrities" given any airtime, but his mixed race heritage presumably ensures that he is a safe bet for them. Despite this the party seems to make very little progress with a membership of around 600 in 2023, as calculated from the figures given in their accounts lodged with the Electoral Commission. It may now be a fair few higher a year or so later, but time will tell if they stay the pace.

Which Nationalist Party? (3 of 4)

Homeland Party

The party continues to lead the field, now being reported as "…the largest Nationalist party in Britain today." HP is certainly making waves with its policy on remigration, holding its own Big Remigration Conference in April (see report on page 8). The continual pushing of that agenda has resulted in other Nationalist parties adopting the terminology, as well as nearly all other party leaders, including Starmer, now talking (apparently) seriously about the problems of immigration. On the basis of this HP were invited to attend and speak at the European Remigration Summit 25 in Italy attended by the leading Nationalist parties in Europe.

Prior to the party's Remigration Conference they suffered a few hiccups as Steve Laws, a high-profile social media commentator, decided the party were not hard-line enough and consequently left the party taking a few of his supporters with him. It appears that many of the party detractors felt this was a serious setback, but HP seemed to ride over what turned out to be a mini-storm and continue with the positive momentum that exists within the party.

8 candidates stood for the party in the elections, resulting in the election of 1 councillor in Wiltshire and South West Regional Organiser Mike Lynton, although not elected, 9receiving 15% of the vote for Callington Town Council.

National Front

Little seems to be happening within the party other than the forays that party leader, Tony Martin, makes into, for example, the activities of Hope Not Hate. Whether this will improve under the current political climate remains to be seen.

It was somewhat of a surprise then that the party stood a candidate in the recent elections, although polling only 18 votes or 0.6% of the total in Heanor, Derbyshire, where the BNP had won several seats in the past.

National Housing Party UK

With the NHPUK also identifying as a "Christian Nationalist Party" (the name utilised for a new party, as above), it may be proving a burden to it. There seems no evidence of any regular party activity although the website is regularly updated with new articles.

Similarly to the NF, the NHPUK also stood just one candidate in the elections, polling 33 votes or 1.1% of the vote in Hillmorton, Warwickshire.

National Rebirth Party

The NRP continue making progress with several active branches and issue 8 of its monthly magazine out now. The party gives the impression it has a unique approach to Nationalism, although on the face of it, it is just presented differently. Young party leader, Alek Yerbury, is making one key mistake however, particularly as he must be hoping to increase the membership of his party and potentially drawing people away from other groups. Yerbury needs to realise that most Nationalists don't take too kindly to being criticised in how they 'do' Nationalism, and so runs the risk of alienating a very large pool of potential members. Rather than criticising individuals and their actions, he needs to concentrate solely on the promotion of his own party. Some Nationalists have been around for quite some time and have seen 'bright young things' come and go, so it would not go amiss to give a little respect to those who have a great deal more experience in Nationalism. If he could curb his arrogance then his party has the ability to do well.

There were no National Rebirth Party candidates at the recent elections and it remains to be seen at what stage the party deems it appropriate to follow the electoral route. It is difficult to predict the future for this party, as said last month, it may well have plateaued and is as big as it is going to get, but if Yerbury looks at the overall Nationalist picture more sympathetically, then the party has potential.

Patriotic Alternative

PA retain their high profile in Nationalism but in recent years the splits resulting in the formation of the Homeland Party and National Rebirth Party seem to have taken a toll, in that the party is no longer seen as the major Nationalist group. It continues with its community based, leafletting and social media activities and has recently announced its Summer Festival, as taking place from the 4th to 6th July. It is stated that this year's festival will be slightly different to usual, whilst retaining a camp, hike and BBQ, it will include a large marquee for live music and entertainment, for those that remember, probably on similar lines to the BNP's Red, White and Blue Festivals of old.

Patriotic Alternative contd.

In the past month PA has been involved in other ventures with party leader, Mark Collett, appearing as a guest at the Awakening Conference in Finland, the theme of which was "Immigration and the White Fertility Crisis", where he shared the stage with Nationalists from across the world and including American Jared Taylor, editor of American Renaissance. The party also supported Britain First in Birmingham at their March for Remigration and reported that PA " .. support other Nationalist groups to amplify their message". Such events show that despite their setbacks recently PA still have influence in Nationalism contrary to our comment in our last PA update, and, on the face of it, are open to attempting some unity in our community.

Additionally, in an article by Collett on the party website, he expressed support for Reform UK stating that "We recognise the only political route to achieving (the destruction of Labour and the Tories) is through the Reform Party", and however much Nationalists see them as a form of controlled opposition, he may well be correct.

Finally, despite some Nationalists questioning PA's finances, the fact that PA provide financial support to Nationalist prisoners, and others including most lately Lucy Connolly, imprisoned on the basis of a tweet that seemed to upset a few people, is very noble and for that they should be commended.

Reclaim Party

Despite Reclaim being extremely well funded by businessman Jeremy Hosking, to the tune of £700,000 in 2023, and some social media activity, the party generally appears dormant, with no news items regarding party activity on its website. No candidates stood in the elections. If there is no change to this over the next few months it is likely that Reclaim will be removed from our coverage.

Reform UK

The surge in popularity for Reform, as seen in various opinion polls this year and as reported in our last edition, certainly proved itself at the recent elections, despite some infighting in the party at the expense of Rupert Lowe's departure. This had little, if any effect, on the party's performance which certainly came as a shock to both Labour and the Conservatives.

In the parliamentary by-election in Runcorn and Helsby, one of Labour's safest seats, Sara Pochin narrowly won, with a swing from Labour of over 17%. Of the 6 mayoral elections Reform won 2, coming 2nd in the other 4. On top of this, the party achieved outstanding results in the council elections winning 677 seats of the 1,641 seats contested, 41% of the total in 23 local authorities. With further elections taking place next May, many of those in areas that postponed them this year it will be a very interesting contest indeed, with Reform already working towards achieving success. The party has already overtaken the Conservative Party as the main opposition to Labour and this must be very worrying indeed for Starmer and Co., who attempts to belittle Farage and his party in the same way that the mainstream media seem not to consider them as serious contenders. However, the more that they do this, the more determined the party and its supporters become and despite the party being a moderate and not an ethno-Nationalist party, true Nationalists must take the results positively knowing that at least a part of our agenda will be implemented if the party continues to succeed.

UKIP

Since the appointment of Nick Tenconi as party leader there has been an upturn in UKIP activities including a Mass Deportation Tour visiting a different city each month. Although attendance at these events has so far been relatively poor, it seems Antifa still see UKIP as a threat and has turned out in numbers to protest against them.

Tenconi seems to believe that UKIP can still be as popular as they once were even with a more extreme view, despite expressing a dislike for ethno-Nationalists. It is unlikely that such statements on the lines of "UKIP will deport bands such as Kneecap to North Korea" or in his speeches at his rallies such that as well as deporting illegal immigrants, UKIP would also deport extreme-left wing agitators, are somewhat ridiculous. Despite Nationalists agreeing with such steps they will never happen and further emphasises the fact Tenconi is relishing extremism for effect.

Tenconi has also recently been courting the idea that Tommy Robinson and associates would be welcome in UKIP, and they have also been speaking the UKIP language, however on the basis of the recent election results that is unlikely to happen. Of the 17 seats contested they polled badly coming last in nearly all of them with an average vote of around 1%. So, where now for UKIP? With Tenconi as leader it will certainly be interesting.

The Best of Spearhead Magazine – Oct 1977 (1)

Our regular feature, in which we reprint extracts from Spearhead magazine continues in this edition of Britain, My Nation, with issue number 110 from October 1977. Spearhead magazine, in our opinion, the best Nationalist publication produced for our movement, was at this time, edited by Richard Verrall, with Martin Webster as contributing editor and of course, John Tyndall as publisher.

For a magazine nigh on 50 years old, we can see that the hurdles to our struggle are the same then as they are today. Our enemies continue in their attempts to remove our right to a political platform and our right to enjoy the freedom of speech that our country once took for granted. This indicates that they genuinely see us as a threat and so have to deal with us in order to prevent our growth and consequently damage their support base. Despite the oppression, Nationalism has always seen the opposition 'foot-soldiers' as something of a joke and today the abuse and name-calling that we were and still are subjected to seems to be falling on deaf ears, as our immunity grows to it as a result of its overuse. Today everyone and anyone who disagrees with the leftist ideology is called a racist or a Nazi or whatever else they think may upset us. However this immunity is being offset by the left inveigling themselves into positions of authority and power thereby making it more difficult for us operate. This makes it imperative that all strands of Nationalism work together to fight the beast we are up against. We have the will and the numbers, if we work together, to overcome this oppression. We also need the courage to hold our heads high and be proud of what we believe in and so save our race and nation.

JOKE OF THE MONTH . . .

KEEP NAZIS OUT OF STOCKPORT!

RED RABBLE HOODWINKED . . .

MANCHESTER MARCH AND RALLY HUGE SUCCESS

Around 1,500 National Front members marched through Manchester to an open-air rally in the Levenshulme area of the city last month, while confused mobs of Socialist Workers Party hooligans intent on violence were stranded in Stockport.

The march was the culmination of weeks of careful planning designed to demonstrate a simple but important political point to the press, the police and the public – that National Front activities, of themselves, do not generate public disorder. Violence only occurs when it is organised against NF activities by the thugs of the extreme left. This point was made last month with complete success. A major NF march passed off peacefully because the location was kept secret from the hooligans of the Left, who were hoodwinked into assembling for a quite fruitless "counter-demonstration" five miles away in Stockport.

Following the ban on the planned march and rally in Hyde Town Hall imposed by the Chief Constable of Manchester under the threat of left-wing violence, the National Front decided on the vital necessity of going ahead with an activity in Greater Manchester, outside the area of Tameside covered by the ban. The NF could not be seen to be lying down under the kind of threats, aimed in the final analysis at destroying our ability to organise politically, which had so obviously intimidated the authorities.

Immediately after the announcement of the ban, NF Activities Organiser Martin Webster announced his intention of walking alone along the route of the planned march, carrying a Union Jack and placard reading "Defend British Free Speech from Red Terorrism." Not only did this courageous demonstration win massive publicity impact for the National Front, highlighting in the public mind the threat to lawful political activity from Red gangsterism, but it demonstrated to those weak elements in authority that the appeasement of Communist lawlessness by banning legitimate political activity will not be the easy way out. The National Front, at any rate, will never give up its political rights, come what may.

The point was emphasised even more forcibly by the immediate planning of an alternative march in Manchester, to take place simultaneously with Martin Webster's one-man protest in Hyde. It was not long before many people in positions of authority began to realise that giving in to the extreme Left and denying the NF's right to freedom of speech had not solved the problem. The National Front is not the party to quietly give up, like so many other patriotic movements, and life was soon seen to be getting more complicated, not less. This tactic was itself of vital importance, since the authorities must be made to confront and deal with the real problem, which is organised communist violence.

By carefully ensuring that the location of the march was kept secret, by close liaison with the police, and by splitting the forces of Left and decoying them to Stockport, a major victory was won, a victory all the more important because the tactics enabled the public to observe the frantic Red mobs chasing around the city in search of a violent confrontation. Nothing could have illustrated more clearly who the troublemakers are from whence the violence originates.

Special arrangements were made for taking the press to the location of the march, which resulted in extensive publicity, not least a Nationwide TV film of the events which clearly brought out the NF's own political objectives in holding the march. The enthusiastic rally which followed was chaired by S. Lancashire Regional Organiser Mike Cowley, and addressed by Derek Warburton, prospective NF Parliamentary candidate for Stockport, Andrew Fountaine and John Tyndall.

ANNUAL
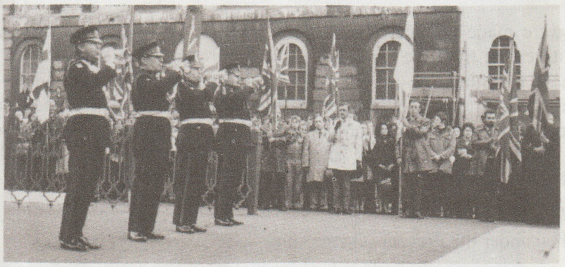
REMEMBRANCE DAY PARADE

Sunday, 13th November



ASSEMBLE 2.00 p.m. AT GROSVENOR GARDENS, NEAR VICTORIA STATION, LONDON S.W.1.

Bring all your friends to this great and moving non-political occasion, in which tributes are paid to those who gave their lives in both world wars, including those of Rhodesia and South Africa.

N.F. MAN LEADS PRO-WHITE CAMPAIGN IN SOUTH AFRICA

Former National Front activist, Brendan Wilmer, who emigrated to South Africa, is now leading the struggle among South Africans for the maintenance of White civilisation in Rhodesia.

Brendan, who was the founder of the now flourishing Leicester Branch of the NF, is the national director of the Save Rhodesia Campaign in South Africa.

Recently Brendan led a group of activists in a spectacular demonstration against the Labour party's support for the murderous terrorists of the so-called Patriotic Front. They burst into the Consulate General Offices in Cape Town, unfurling banners accusing Mr. Callaghan and Dr. David Owen of complicity in the murder of six-month old baby Natasha Glenny by Black terrorists.

The banners proclaimed: "Owen and Callaghan accomplices to baby murder" and "British money helped to buy the bayonets which killed Natasha". Brendan Wilmer tossed 30 coins on the floor and told officials: "On behalf of South Africa I throw 30 pieces of silver."

Good luck to Brendan Wilmer and the Save Rhodesia Campaign. We are delighted that a former NF Organiser has taken the fight to the front line with real NF-style activism.

Elections to the Directorate

The below-named officers of the party were elected to the nine vacant places on the NF National Directorate in the elections for 1977/78. The votes for each candidate, in descending order of votes, were as follows:–

3rd Mr. Andrew Fountaine . . . 1,836 votes
4th Mr. Paul Kavanagh. . . . . 1,423 votes
5th Mr. David Bruce . . . . . 1,393 votes
6th Mrs. Beryl Mitchell . . . . . 1,384 votes
7th Mr. Malcolm Skeggs . . . . . 1,330 votes
8th Mr. Richard Edmonds . . . 1,184 votes
9th Mr. Herbert Andrew. . . . . 1,148 votes

The above officers join Andrew Brons, Richard Verrall, Michael Stubbs, George Wright, Jeremy Wotherspoon, Blaise Wyndham, Peter Williams, Gerry Oldland, Malcolm Smith, David Smith and Denis Horton on the NF National Directorate.

OBITUARY

ALAN KEMP

It is with deep regret and sadness that we have to announce the death of Alan Kemp, aged 17. Alan died on Sunday 4th September after being admitted to hospital two days previously.

Alan joined the Norwich Branch of the National Front in 1975, and despite his age became one of the most prominent and respected activists in the region, rarely missing a march or leafletting session.

Not content with this, Alan spent all his spare time promoting the National Front, and devoted all his holiday to helping in the election campaigns of local NF candidates.

Only two months before his death, Alan did a sponsored cycle ride to Kings Lynn and back, and raised £95.50 for Norwich Branch funds.

All those who knew Alan will testify that he was one of the most polite, cheerful and happy people around.

In the years and struggles ahead Alan will be sadly missed, but never forgotten.

Our deepest sympathy goes to his family.

Freedom of Information Act 2000

The Freedom of Information Act 2000 (the FOIA) was intended to create transparency in the public sector and has proved most useful to Nationalists over the years to substantiate claims made by our policy-makers and also for propaganda purposes. This was taken advantage of by the Britain, My Nation editor along with the late Tom Linden, back in British National Party days when they worked together, defining the questions to be asked, of whom, the subsequent managing of the responses and how then to utilise the information to our benefit.

In our last edition we looked at several requests made to Swindon Borough Council, near to the home location of our editor. This time we look briefly at FOI requests relating to Union Flag Flying and Council Staff Costs and also requests made to the Home Office, in 2014 and in relation to Prevent, the government's strategy to tackle terrorism and extremism in the UK.

With regards flag flying several requests were made of local councils and surprisingly the responses were positive to the extent that they complied with edicts from the Department of Culture on when flags should be flown. Asking the same question more than 10 years later would, we suspect, be quite different, particularly in respect to some councils flying flags of foreign countries as well as the sexual perversion flags. On council staff costs, a couple of councils were evasive, suggesting the information could be viewed by visiting their offices. Those who did reply provided costs that did not seem excessive and so little could be gleaned from that information. Again, it would be interesting to compare those figures with those of today.

More interesting were the responses relating to the government's Prevent scheme, we asked the Home Office:-

1. How many organisations are proscribed under the Prevent scheme? and
2. Which organisations are proscribed?

In response to question 1 the Home Office advised that there were "55 international terrorist organisations proscribed under the Terrorism Act 2000". Of these 55 the vast majority were Islamic groups.

It will interest to reader's, that as of today, there are 81 proscribed groups, again with the vast majority being Islamic groups, however the image from the literature issued in 2014 (left) would seem to suggest the main threat to British security lies elsewhere! In 2014 the editor was employed by the NHS and emails were sent out to all NHS establishments introducing the 'Building Partnerships, Staying Safe' document, a 43 page booklet informing of the NHS strategy relating to Prevent. This also included details of the 'self–assessment tool' which enabled NHS employees to determine if they were adequately monitoring and managing potential risk! A quick search on the internet today will provide a massive amount of references to the Prevent scheme. Sadly, despite knowing that the main risk is Islamic, everyone else is required to get involved and do the work that the police and security services should be doing to protect our people against this potential threat

Further to this, a FOI request was sent to the Home Office asking "..the total cost of the Government's PREVENT strategy on a year by year basis for the years 2009-13".

The reply included figures for four full years each with an average spend of over £40 million for each year. An internet search suggests the current annual expenditure is not much higher, but nevertheless it is a very large sum of money, but what is it being spent on? One source of information suggests that "since 2012, almost 3,000 people have been adopted onto Prevent's voluntary and confidential Channel programme, helping them to move away from terrorism and enabling them to live more stable and fulfilling lives". We feel sure that this will put reader's minds at ease knowing this, especially when the source continues with ".. 82% of those that exited the process did so with no further radicalisation concerns", which makes one wonder about the other 18%!

In our next article we will look at more recent FOI requests and how it seems that those asked various questions are seemingy getting wise to the information being potentially used against them and how they are becoming increasingly evasive in their responses.

Dear Sirs

The local council elections have come and gone resulting in a massive swing to Nigel Farage's Reform UK. Some Nationalists may see this as a good thing and on the basis that it gave the main parties a bloody nose I have to agree. However, with the odd exception it is civic nationalism that has won the day and if we are to stand any chance of returning our nation to the glory days of fifty or so years ago then our movement needs a jolly good shake-up! If anyone thinks that Farage and crew will do anything about the masses of illegal immigrants already here then I believe they are truly in denial. That is why it is so important that true Nationalists set aside their differences and work together for the better good. Sadly, so many of our people are being taken for a ride in thinking that Reform UK are the answer to our prayers when it is simply another example of controlled opposition. Farage, the man who brags about "destroying the BNP" must be laughing into his beer, but may well be our next Prime Minister. On the positive side it really couldn't be any worse than those we have had, certainly in my lifetime.

Gerry Hardwicke - London

Dear Editor

I've only just been introduced to your magazine by a work colleague and I am very glad to have been so. Sadly these days too many people appear to be losing the will to read proper literature, being more interested in going "on-line". It seems that the addictive nature of mobile phones is leading to social withdrawal on a mass scale simply witnessed wherever you are these days, out walking, shopping, at work, on the bus, and so on, everyone is glued to their phones. I am an older Nationalist, having been around for more years than I care to mention, but I am pleased that for the first half of my life we did not have mobile phones and it seemed to me that people were generally more pleasant and prepared to engage in conversation. It may be just my own social circle, but it does seem like people are tiring of social media and are reducing the time they spend on-line and actively reverting back to that fine old art of talking to each other. I truly hope so! Keep up the good work with the magazine (I've now acquired all of the back copies and find them all very interesting reading)

Barry Lucas - Westbury

Dear Britain, My Nation

I very much enjoy your magazine and look forward to each issue. I feel I must make a point that as a woman and a Nationalist I am surprised that there appear so few of us. Why are there not more of us? Surely as Mothers of children, and being those that suffer at the hands of the foreign invader most, I would have thought that there would be a mass movement of women in Nationalism by virtue of the need for that necessary protectionism at the very least. We cannot continue allowing the mass rape of our young girls by these foreigners, we must stand up and stand together to protect and seek justice for those that have been so abused. We must also stand up for our freedom to live our lives the way we want to and not simply accept, for example, that we should dress in a manner to avoid the interest of these foreigners. They have decided to make a life here and so they must be prepared to live as we do and not how they lived from whence they came. If they are unable to do that then they should not be here and as far as I am concerned there is no reason they should be here anyway. It's time, ladies, for us to stand up against these backward and uncivilised aliens and time to let our government know how we feel about the situation and the lack of protection they are giving to us.
